Ludhiana, February 2

The Department of Food Science and Technology, Punjab Agricultural University, organised two food safety and supervisor trainings (FoSTaC) on January 28 (basic) and from January 30-31 (advanced).

The Punjab Agricultural University, being training partner of the Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI), conducted the two trainings successfully under the patron-ship of Vice-Chancellor Baldev Singh Dhillon and Director of Research Navtej Singh Bains.

A total of 38 and 12 participants for basic and advance trainings participated, respectively.

Dr Dhillon appreciated the efforts made by the department for the execution of the training programmes.

Dr Poonam A Sachdev, head of the department, welcomed the trainees and shared the details of the training programmes.

She informed that the trainees were acquainted with various laws and regulations related to food handling and manufacturing along with the Covid instructions to be followed in the food industry.

The trainees were further assessed on their level of understanding through a post training exam.
